CABOT

What came near causing serious results should be a warning to anyone, against carelessly leaving, or putting, refuse of vegetables on which has been used arsenate of lead, or any other poisonous stuff, where cattle can eat it, thereby causing serious results, as was the case on southwest hill recently, when a cow belonging to the children of Hubert Wheeler was taken sick and died. Their infant of a few months, that was drinking the milk of this cow, was taken quite ill, but recovered. An older child was also ill from this same cause. From the time this cow was a small calf it had been fed and cared for by the oldest children of Mr. Wheeler. They had harnessed and driven it around with bit and bridle, like a colt, drawing the younger ones to the village, a distance of about two miles. Her name was Bessie and her death was a great grief to these children.

AMUSEMENT NOTES

Universal Appeal of "Experience"—All Classes Are Attracted.

The singular feature concerning "Experience," the modern morality drama, which E. Ray Comstock and Morris Gest will present at the opera house Saturday, Nov. 1, is the fact that it has an appeal for everyone. Plays about lawyers might interest lawyers but not the general public; a play about a saloon keeper might interest the anti-temperance forces, but not the church people; a play dealing with a surgical operation might attract surgeons, but here, in one play, "Experience," is found a play which seems to have a universal appeal. It is difficult to think of any play which reaches out so generally and draws into the sphere of its attraction and influence, young, old, rich, poor, "society" people and those one meets in daily life—adv.
